

We Need A Raise!

Lessons and Reflections from Fast Food Organizing in the Northwest

Building off the inspiring fast food strikes of 2013 and 2014, Burgerville workers have taken the fight a step further building a sustained union presence in one of the Northwest's most iconic restaurant chains.

While instability reaches every corner of our society, Burgerville workers have been struggling for over a year not only to improve their conditions, but also to carve out a new pathway for the American workers movement, one that seeks to build resilient organization of low wage workers through direct action, mutual aid, and solidarity.

Join organizers from the Burgerville Workers Union to discuss the reality of organizing in the low wage economy, strategies for building power and winning, and reflections on the critical questions facing union organizing today.

Tuesday, Dec. 5th
10am-12pm

Building 7, Room 116
(the TLC Classroom)
PCC Rock Creek

Sponsored by PCC's Faculty/AP and Classified Unions

Organized by the Burgerville
Workers Union and the Industrial Workers of the World

